

Wednesday, Nov. 09, 2016 | 01:49 pm

Today will begin chilly, as sunshine gives way to more afternoon clouds. Tonight, a weak disturbance will pass to our south likely keeping most of the snow there. However, we are close enough where a brief snow shower cant be ruled out, particularly between 10PM - 3AM. Otherwise, conditions remain cold through the week... Looking ahead to the Friday PM threat, the system will struggle to get organized and just periods of light snow are a more likely scenario rather than a full-fledged storm. It certainly warrants monitoring, but we are favoring totals closer to an inch or two rather than significant accumulations.

SNOW & ICE THREAT		PRECIPITATION THRU NOON TOMORROW
TODAY	NEXT 3 DAYS		6 AM - NOON	12 - 6 PM	6 PM - MID	12 - 6 AM	6 AM - NOON
Tonight: Just a 20% risk of a dusting from flurries or brief snow shower	Friday Night: Monitoring a larger storm, but likely just results in light snow	PROBABILITY	0%	< 10%	10⇒20%	20%	< 10%
		TYPE	-	-	Flurries	SN Shwr	-
		AMOUNT	-	-	0 - Trace	0 - Trace	-
		DURATION	-	-	< 1 hr	< 1 hr	-
		COMMENTS

SHORT TERM FORECAST
TODAY	Morning sunshine gives way to more clouds late. Still very cold. High around 20 W winds increase to 10 - 15 mph, gusts to 20
TONIGHT	Mostly cloudy. A few flurries possible in the evening, with just an isolated snow shower possible 10PM - 3AM. Only 20% chance for a dusting Low near 15 WNW winds 5 - 12 mph
THURSDAY	Quickly turning mostly sunny and breezy. High 24 - 28 NW winds 15 - 25 mph, gusts to 30
THUR NIGHT	Partly cloudy. Low 10 - 15

MEDIUM RANGE FORECAST
FRIDAY	Increasing clouds with light snow possible towards evening, and into the night. Likely a salting or low-end plowable event High 25 - 30
SATURDAY	Blustery with early clouds giving way to partial sunshine. High near 30
SUNDAY	Sunny and a bit warmer. Highs in the mid-30s

FORECASTER: Ken Elliott